

The Gospel According To . . .

Let Love Have Its Way!

Love makes us feel whole, complete, purpose in life, wanted, appreciated, valued. It makes us feel very good.

We know what love is. We desire it so much and we want it so much it's been made almost taboo.

Do we really want love? It's there free for who so ever wants it. So either we do or we don't want it. But only if it's on our terms? Which is it?

We sometimes make people love us. We do this by giving, holding on to what people want.

We chase a feeling that needs to be fed and we look for love in all the wrong places and in the wrong people.

It does hurt when we feel rejection and it's ok not to be loved by everybody. They may not think we're the greatest like we do.

Our own thoughts sometimes block loves way of getting to us. True love will not be found in this world. So stop considering others and our way how we see ourselves but see it how God sees us.

Stop looking for excuses to confirm our weaknesses and or our worth. God sees us as fabulous.

God is not of this world so what it has to offer does not affect Him. It can't touch Him. He is love He wants to love. So let Him love us.
